"UNCLE JOE" CANNON'S VICTORY IS CHANGED TO DEFEAT. The House Finally Yields on the Coast Survey Item and the Naval Bill Is Passed-To While Away the Time the Senate Passes

Fifty-eight Pension Bills-Closing Scenes WASHINGTON, June 7 .- By spasmodio jerks the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress came to an end this afternoon after many false When the end was finally reached, Jee" Cannon of Illinois, who last night seld up both Houses, as it were, was chewing the bitter oud of defeat, and Candidate Sulzer was still defiantly but ineffectively tossing his ne and shricking out against the trusts. President McKinley and his Cabinet attended the obsequies, which in the Senate were devoid In the House, however, the wake was of the good old regular style. Cannon's defeat was a general surprise and is due in a measure to the belief that he did not keep up the gait in which he started last night and that he therefore partially deserved the drubbing that Amos Cummings gave him when he said that he was a toy musket instead of a cannon. Last night Mr. Cannon had torn off his collar and cravat in the heat of the fray. To-day he had replaced them, which may have had something to do with the greesman Walker of Massachusetts always took his coat off when engaged in such a scrap as Mr. Cannon was in last night and always kept it off to the end, unless prevented by the eaker, but, as one of Mr. Cannon's friends said of him to-day, perhaps he is not too old to learn, although it is apparent to ever yone who knows him that he was not born yesterday.

The result of the contest between the Coast ent, and the Hydrographic Office. which belongs to the Navy Department, was in there were hardly a dozen men in the House who could tell clearly just what it was they had all been quarrelling about. But it is all over now and Congress will not meet again until

THE SENATE'S CLOSING SESSION. Pension Bills Passed While Waiting for an

Agreement on the Naval Bill. WASHINGTON, June 7.- The Senate met at 11 A.M. While waiting for an agreement by the conferees on the Naval Appropriation bill the House pension, bills that were on the Senate calendar. Afty-eight in number, were taken up and passed.

Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) asked unanimous meent to consider the resolution offered by him a few days ago instructing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to inquire into the contitutionality of the electoral laws in some of the Southern States; but objection was made by Mr. Pettus (Dem., Ala.) and Mr. Berry (Dem.,

After the Senate had been in session forty minutes an hour's recess was taken, and then Mr. Hale (Rep., Me.) reported that the conferees of the two houses on the Naval bill had been unable to agree, and he moved that the Senate insist on its amendments and ask for a further those who were guilty of obstructing legislation (meaning Representative Cannon).

Ar. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) had also some good words for Commander Todd, who had undoub edily, he said, made a mistake in writing the letter he had sent out. It was contrary to navel rules. Buthe had suffered enough in the cast gation which he had received in the other branch of Congress. His record was that of one of the best officers in the Navy, and he cast gation which he had received in the other branch of Congress. His record was that of one of the best officers in the Navy, and he cast gation would find it within the exercise of wisdom, as well as of kindness, to relieve that officer immediately after the first session of the Flitysigh Congress expired.

com, as well as of kindness, to releve that of neer immediately after the first session of the Fitty-sixth Congress expired.

After various short recesses and executive sessions the Senate met for its closing scene at 4:50 P. M. The President pro tem (Mr. Frye) announced that he had placed his signature to the Naval Appropriation bill (the last bill to be sized by him).

On motion of Mr. Allison a committee of two Senators was appointed to wait upon the President, in conjunction with two members of the House, and to inform him that Congress was ready to adjourn unless he had some other communication to make to it, and Senators Allison and Cockrell were appointed. Very soon afterward they reported that they had performed that duty, and that the President had complimented both houses on the amount of business done in such a short time, and had and that he had no further communication to make.

Mr. Cockrell (Dem., Mo.) offered a resolution business done in such a short time, and had said that he had no further communication to make.

Mr. Cockrell (Dem., Mo.) offered a resolution which was agreed to unanimously, tendering the thanks of the Senate to Mr. Frye, President pro tem of the Senate to Mr. Frye, President pro tem of the Senate to Mr. Frye, President pro tem of the Senate to Mr. Frye, President pro tem of the Senate to Mr. Frye add:

"Senators, I appreciate very highly this expession of your confidence and approval. But I think that I should thank you, rather than you me. Your uniform kindness to me has made the duty of presiding over your deliberations a pleasure, not a task. I wish agreeable and safe lourney to your homes, and hope that our dear Lord will permit you all, us all, to meet here in his chamber next December." (Clapping of hands on the floor and in the galleries.)

A few minutes more intervened and then the President pro tem, rising, said:

The hour of 5 o clock having arrived, in accordance with the resolution of Congress the Senate stands adjourned sine dic."

As the last words were pronounced a loud strident voice cried out from one of the public galleries. "A message from the great white throne: Jesus is coming soon." For some minutes afterward Senators took leave of each other and of officers of the Senate with every show of friendliness and esteem, and then by degrees the Senate chamber was deserted, and the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress was ended.

WASHINGTON, June 7 - When the House reconvened at 1 o'clock this morning few memwrangle between the conferees on the Naval bill and that it would be some time in the afteron before the conferees would report, so only a handful of members appeared. On motion of Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.) the House adjourned until noon, thus putting an end to the legislative day of Tuesday, which lasted from Tuesday, at noon, until Thursday, at 10:02 A. M., a total of forty-six hours. By this action the House lost the legislative day of June 6, which dropped entirely out of the journal of the and Sulzer in Close Embrace." Loud shouts of laughter followed the anouncement, as the verbal combats during this selon between Mr. Grosvenor and Mr. Sulzer have been many and interesting. Several of the members made suggestions of one kind or mother, and Mr. Williams (Dem., Miss.) assured the house that Mr. Sulzer was as anxious to deny the headline as Mr. Grosvenor. Mr. Terry wanted to know whose privilege it was, Mr. Sulzer's or Mr. Grosvenor's.

"There are some crosses," continued Mr. Grosvenor in a serious manner, "which men in public life must bear. But there are others, against which they have a right to protest and which they should be permitted to place on the shoulders of the persons to whom they belong.

shoulders of the persons to whom they belong.
This is one of them." [Laughter and applause.]
Mr. Grosvenor then asked to have read the extract from the report of the House proceedings in This Sun, saying that this would be his vindication.
The Speaker interrupted a moment to call attention to the fact that this must be under unanimous consent, apparently for the purpose of "balting" Mr. Lentz, who had been objecting to everything.
Mr. Lentz arose to the bait, swallowed it, hook, line and sinker, and said: "Mr. Speaker, print 10,000 copies of the testimony [cries of Shut up!" Sit down!" &c.] I must refuse my consent."

Shut up! 'Sit down!' &c.] I must refuse my consent.

Mr Williams (Dem., Miss.) and others begged that Mr. Lentz withdraw his objection, as they knew Mr. Sulzer wanted to explain also.

Mr. Grosvenor then claimed the floor under the question of personal privilege and insisted that when the paragraph was read they would see what his question of privilege was.

Mr. Lentz attempted to object again, but the Speaker told him he was out of order, and the paragraph was read, showing that it was Mr. Cannon, and not Mr. Grosvenor, who had so fondly embraced Mr. Sulzer. At this there was more laughter, in the midst of which Mr. Sulzer rose and said:

"I know the country will accept the explanation of the gentleman from Ohio. For myself, I am glad it was the distinguished gentleman from Illinois and not the gentleman from Ohio."

Uprogrious laughter and applause followed

Obio."

Uproarious laughter and applause followed this sally, which was only subdued by Speaker Henderson dryly remarking: "The House must come to order, as equally important business as this is liable to come before the House."

At 1:05 o'clock Mr. Cannon presented the conference report on the Navai Appropriation bill, reporting another disagreement, and moved the House insist further on its contention. A number of Senators appeared on the floor, among them Senators Quarles and Lodge. The latter was particularly active, urging different members of the House to recede and concur in the Senate position. Mr. Foss of Illinois, acting chairman of the Navai Committee, kept in the background, but Messrs. Dayton (Rep., W. Va.) and Cummings (Dem., N. Y.) asked that the House recede.

Mr. Cannon proposed an amendment making the appropriation for ocean surveys applicable to the waters of Cuba and the Philippines and not to the coasts, leaving the latter under the charge of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. He thought such an amendment would lead to a settlement within sixty minutes. Mr. Cannon's amendment follows;

"Ocean Surveys—For ocean surveys and surveys of the waters of Cuba and the Philippine archipelago, but not the coasts thereof, and for the purchase of nautical books, charts and sailing directions, and freight and express charges on the same, $50,000."

Considerable discussion ensued, after which Mr. Dayton moved to recede and concur.

Mr. Moody (Rep., Mass.) apologized publicly for his remarks of last night accusing the conferes of a breach of trust, saying the words were uttered in the heat of debate and that he had already apologized in private. The House applauded his apology and when Mr. Foss shook hands with him the House again applications, the course of Mr. Cummings (Den., N. Y.) aroused great treaset by extractives the course of Mr. Cunnenters.

site of its a mendments and ask for a further conference.

Mr. Chandler inquired why a further conference was asked if the conference were determined not to agree.

"Because," Mr. Hale replied, "there is a chance that in the next-conference a compromise may be reached."

After some colloquy Mr. Haie withdrew the request for a further conference and the Senate simply voted to insist on its amendments.

Mr. Petus (Dem., Al.), in view of the poselbility of a failure to adjust the differences on the Naval Appropriation bill, introduced a joint resolution extending to the next fiscal year the appropriations made for the current year, so far as they may be applicable. It was laid on the table so as to be in easy. Mr. Allson, a further When the Senate, after two recesses, came together again at 3 P. The ill-feeling between Messrs. Cannon and Dayton resulted in a sharp exchange of words. Mr. Dayton wanted to be heard on his motion, but could not secure time except from Mr. Cannon, and this he scornfully declined to do.

Mr. Cannon then offered Mr. Foss 19 minutes of his time and Mr. Dayton called to Mr. Foss to reject the offer. "I am dealing with my colleague from Illinois," said Mr. Cannon, curtly.

"And you will deal with me later, in a measure, "replied Mr. Dayton, deliberately and with emphasis.

Mr. Foss, however, accepted the offer of Mr. Cannon and spent the time explaining bis course. He insisted that the House should recede and concur.

Mr. Cannon demanded the previous question on Mr. Dayton's metion to recede and concur.

Mr. Cannon demanded the previous question on Mr. Dayton's metion to recede and concur.

A standing vote resulted: Yeas, 118; nays, 96; absent, 12. So the House receded from its position and concurred in the two Senate amendments to the Naval bill. The Speaker then announced the passage of the Naval bill, which was received with much applause.

Mr. Foss (Rep., Ill.) asked unanimous consent for the passage of a resolution authorizing the Committee on Naval Affairs to sit during the recess of Congress. Mr. Lentz objected.

Mr. Payne called up the adjournment resolution passed by the Senate, fixing 5 o'clock of to-day as the time of adjournment.

Mr. Sulzer Gem., N. Y.) opposed the adoption of the resolution, saying no adjournment should be taken until the Senate passed the Anti-Trust bill of the House. Mr. Sulzer demanded the yeas and nays, which were ordered. Speaker Henderson declined to recognize Mr. Lentz.

Mr. Bromwell (Rep., Ohlo), attempted to suspend the rules and pass the Grand Army Pension bill.

Mr. Williams (Dem., Miss.), demanded a second and raised the point of no quorum. While a quorum was assembling Mr. Bromwell withdrew the bill, saying that it was evident the bill could not be passed.

At 4:30 o'clock, In the interval the members amused themselves and the audience in the galleries by singing.

At 4:41 the committee returned and reported that the President had no further communication to make to the House.

Speaker Henderson made a brief address, which was received with great applause from the floor and the galleries, and at 5 o'clock he declared the session adjourned sine die.

When the chorus, "The Army and Navy Forever," was sung,it was suggested that the Hydrographic Office should be included so that it would be, "the Army, the Navy and the Hydrographic Office Forever." "Auld Lang Syne," was then "rended" by the choristers, and Mr. Fitzgerald sang a solo, "The Old Oaken Bucket," with a of the Sea" was discovered by the eminent musicians, and then came a burst of applause when the Southern contingent, headed by Messrs. THE PRESIDENT AT THE CAPITOL. He Signs the Naval Appropriation Bill and 61 Private Pension Bills.

WASHINGTON, June 7.-Despite the tedious ness of his long wait at the Capitol yesterday afternoon and last evening, President McKinley afternoon and last evening, President McKinley came there again to-day, reaching the President's room shortly before 4 P. M. and remaining until final adjournment had been announced. In that interval he received calls from members of the two houses and signed sixty-one private pension bills, one or two others of minor importance, which had received final action, in the Senate in the closing 'hours. Fifteen minutes before the hour fixed for adjournment, the Naval Appropriation bill, which had blocked the closing of the session for twenty-six hours, reached the Senate with the ink from Speaker Henderson's pen scarcely dry. President pro tem. Frye inscribed his name on the parchment and a moment later it had become law by the President's signature.

They hold that the President is under no obligations to do conthing further for Mr. Bynum.

EXERCISES AT WEST POINT. CADETS AT BATTALION AND TENT PITCHING.

ercises in Riding Hall-Baseball Game on Saturday Between Picked Nines of Cadets and Members of the Seventh Regiment.

WEST POINT, June 7 .- During the time Col. Mills, Superintendent, and Col. Hein, Commandant of Cadets, have been here, a number of additions have been made to the cadet drill which give the graduating week exercises a certain go and snap which they lacked in the past, interesting as the old routine always proved to be to visitors. One of the changes was the introduction of the sham battle on new lines, which was worked with such triumphant success yesterday. Another was the drill in ent-pitching, "castrametation," as it is called, which was the picturesque feature of to-day's exercises on the parade-ground green. Of course the cadets have always had instruction in pitching tents, but never before to-day was this made a feature of graduation week exer-

The crowd of spectators which assembled to ee it was about as large as that which gathered to see the sham battle yesterday. The entire western edge of the parade ground over in front of the officers' residences was lined three or four deep with spectators. |From the other side of the ground it looked as though they were all ladies, for the reason that ladies were numerous enough to fill all the front benches. And behind the benches were many other ladies who could not get seats, and who stood with their escorts patiently through the long battalion drill, the long tent drill and the dress parade which closed the show. It was a strikingly pretty spectacle to-day, and maybe the ladies enjoyed it almost as much as they did the crash and roar of the flerce conflict which raged over the same green lawn vesterday afternoon. It was the tent-making which caught the pectators to-day, the sudden uprising on the green as if by magic of a whole village of snowy tents. The battalion drill was as nteresting as a battalion drill always is when done to perfection; but people who have been here several days seeing dress parade every night have got so they take perfection in mere everyday drill as a matter of course. The cadets were in gray shirts, trousers, lavender leggins and slouch army hats, the effect of which is to give them a curiously stalwart appearance as compared with the ramrodtailed coat and white trousers of the dress parade and everyday wear. You could see in the play of shoulders under the loose shirts the splendid results which have come from their gymnasium work. There was not a trace left of the prim, dapper look which the regulation cadet uniform gives them. Gen. Viele told to-day of a person who jocosely struck a mild-looking cadet and received a jocular punch in return which left him short of wind punch in return which left him short of wind for the rest of the day. There is no shadow of doubt that a reviewing board of prize ring sports would promote them on sight to the full rank and honors of "husky boys."

Col. Hein conducted the battalion drill in person, and at its close waved his hand to the band, which swung out to the head of the column and led the way to the barracks. There was not much to do there evidently, for it seemed as though the end of the line had hardly got out of sight under the trees on the south side of the green before the whole corps was marching back again. They were still in gray, the only difference in their appearance being a broad girdle of white slung over every cadet's shoulder as the army blanket roll is worn. That was the tending canvas, half a shelter tent to each cadet, and the great bundles of canvas which go to make up the wall and conical tents were stowed away somewhere and somehow that was beyond the lay mind to understand. It was close up in front of the spectators' benches on the west side of the ground that the tent pitching began. There was a quick running hither and thither of gray-shirted groups, and out of the bustle there suddenly appeared dots of white upon the green. Then there was a clatter of stake driving, and the sides and peaks of wall and conical tents sprang up like so many monster mushrooms out of the ground. When you turned to watch one group and looked around again two of three more had come into being while your back was turned. As a matter of fact, it was just ten minutes, but it did not seem any more than as many seconds, before fourteen big wall and conical tents were up for the rest of the day. There is no shadow ter of fact, it was just ten minutes, but it did not seem any more than as many seconds, before fourteen big wall and conical tents were up and ready for the officers to go to housekeeping in. The shelter tents came next. It was even a more picturesque affair, the making of these, than was the erection of the more imposing wall and conical affairs.

Following two or three low words of command the entire body of cadetas swung out into a great, wide circle, their arms extended to the farthest

The Rhett family, fortunately, has not lived to see the United States split in two, but it has lived to turn out as promising a young officer to fight for the Stars and Stripes as West Point has given to the country in a long time. South Carolina is immensely proud of young Rhett's splendid record here, and the papers of the State have printed many eulogies on his West Point career. Gustave R. Lukesh of Chio was fourth man in the class last year and Charlee R. Lawson of Massachusetts fifth. Whether they will retain their relative positions or five is as yet not quite clear. If Lawson remains, Massachusetts will have the remarkable distinction of contributing three out of the five honor men in the graduating class. All that is known of the results of the examinations so far is that seventeen men, three in the first class, six in the second and eight in the fourth, will have to stand another examination in drill and regulations. They have not failed. They are to have another chance—that is all.

The great event of this year's graduating week, so far as the West Point alumni are concerned, is the dedication of the Culion Memoral Hall on Tuesday evening next. At least one hundred and fifty graduates of the Academy are expected here for the ceremonies. Among them will be Gen. Schoffeld and a number of other distinguished officers of the army. The dedication will take place in the hall itself and will be simple enough. The Superintendent of the Academy, Col. Mills, will make a speech formally turning the building over to Gen. Viele, the President for the current year of the association of the graduates of the Military Academy. Gen. Viele will accept the transfer in an appropriate speech, and then turn the building over to the Hon. Elihu Root, Secretary of War, who is expected to make a speech of considerable length. Gen. Miles also will speak, and there is to be a banquet in the new hall, at which Congressman Grosvenor will respond to the toast of "The President." The other toasts will be "The Army," to which Gen. Miles will respond, and "The Military Academy, response by Gen. Manderson of the Board of Visitors. One feature of the new hall is a series of forty-five furnished rooms for the use of graduates when they come here. These will be filled next week in the order of application, and in case there are not accommodations either in the hall, the hotel or elsewhere for the guests who are here next Tuesday evening, a special train will be run to New York, leaving here at midnight. The will be able to accept the invitation has not yet been learned.

The officers of the post are much disappointed at the failure of Congress to promote the master of the sword to the rank of commistioned officer. The effort to bring this about has been persistent for years, but has always resulted in failure, although it is a measure that has been strongly urged by army men. It was thought to be through at last when the Senate concurred in the proposition just before adjournment this week, and Mr. Herman J. Koehler, who has held the office for sixteen years, was warmly congratulated, but in the last conference it was somehow lost in the shuffle, and now the measure will have to go over for another year at least. Mr. Koehler snime, and now the measure will have to go over for another year at least. Mr. Koehle has made the sword and gymnastic exercise one of the great features of the academy training, and it is believed that his efficiency would be still more increased if backed by militarrank, which appeals to the cadets more that anything else in the matter of discipline.

141 Graduates This Year-Address by Begent

The forty-second anniversary and commend School were held at Carnegie Hall last night The graduating class, which was unusually large, numbered 141 in all, 62 in the school o usiness and 79 in the school of stenography All but sixteen of the graduates from the school of stenography were women.

The addresses of the evening were made by Regent St. Clair McKelway on current topics, and by the Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, who spoke more particularly to the graduating class itself. Some of the things Dr. McKelway said were:

"The same form of government would not do for all the world, unless all the world were prepared for it. This country was filled with long articles by little minds which measured the Dreyfus procedure against our American judicial methods, but which forbore to measure the Molineux procedure against French judicial methods. We may believe that the first procedure was not more of a surprise and a horror to American minds than the second was to French minds.

"Accomplished expansion is as unalterable a finality as national independence or national union. For those who do so will be neither legal nor public nor social punishments, but for them surely will be confinement for life at hard labor within the limits of their own littleness. "The trust question is not a political one but a business one. The flow of the Mississippi to the Gulf is not more due to laws in nature than the evolution of energy in business to forms that will reduce friction, augment output, cheapen product and modify competition can be said to be due to the laws of mind. The trust or the corporation has come to stay as surely as the reaper, the sewing machine, the loom or the engine have come, and it is as much a part of life and of force as they are. Where government will come in and can come in on trust or corporation will be at the point of publicity, accountability, sindictability and punishability, and not at prohibition or at prevention. The contrary is now maintained by parties, but not sincerely, or at least not intelligently. The coming canvass should be an education in the economics of business forces as truly as the canvas in 1896 was a conclusive education for the gold standard in the money of America and of the world. There will be probably a great struggle and a great scare in this campaign, as there was in the last. But there should be no reason to doubt the eventful result, if patriotism and honor and manhood see or steer as straight a course in this campaign as they did in the other."

SECRETARY LONG AT ANNAPOLIS. Received With Honors as He Lands From the

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—Secretary of the Navy Long arrived this afternoon on the despatch boat Dolphin. He was received officially at half past two by the superintendent and officers of the Academy, who were in full dress uniform. They escorted the Secretary to the parade ground and reviewed the battalion of infantry after seventeen guns had been fired in acknowledgment of the visit of the Academy's guest. Secretary Long to-morrow will deliver diplomas to the graduates of this year's class. He performed the same pleasant duty three years ago.

The Secretary attended the banquet given by the graduates assignated to do an elaborate affair. Capt. John Wilkes of North Carolina, who arrived to-day, is the oldest graduate present. The oldest graduate of the Academy belonging to the alumni association is J. Pringle, now living in France. The oldest member of the association in the United States is John W. Bennett of Sygenville. Md.

The exercises to-day consisted of artillery drill, dress parade, winding up with a promenade concert. Many strabgers are in town for the graduating ceremonies and the ball tomorrow night, at which the wife of the superintendent will receive with a cades. despatch boat Dolphin. He was received

ENGLAND'S GOLF VICTORY.

NOT A SCOTCH CLUB IN THE FOUR FIRST

PLACES OF THE CHAMPIONSMIP. Taylor Scores His Third Win in the Event. Beating the Old Record at St. Andrews and Leading Vardon by Eight Strokes -- Maxwell the Best of the Amateurs. Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, June 7 .- The weather o-day was dull, but favorable for good scoring in the second day's play in the open golf championship. The field had been reduced to welve amateurs and thirty-three professionals The order of merit at the end of three rounds was as follows: J. H. Taylor, 234: H. Vardon, 240; Braid and White, 243; Park, 244, and Max-

J. H. Taylor won the championship in 309 strokes, 13 better than in his victory on the same green five years ago. The rounds were 79, 77, 78 and 75. His victory was a very popular one. Harry Vardon came next with 317. Then came J. Braid with 222; Jack White, 323: Auchterlonie, 326, and Willie Park, 328. Maxwell made the best amateur score and ed Hilton by nine strokes.

Vardon and Taylor are now even on their open championship wins, although Vardon holds the pull at match play successes over his rival from Richmond. The only other players to win the champion cup three times were Jamie Anderson of St. Andrews, who was ahead in 1877, 1878 and 1879, and Bob Fergueson of Musselburgh, who succeeded in 1880, 1881 and 1882. Before 1872, in the former championship, Tom Morris, Sr., Willie Park and Tom Morris, Jr., equalled or beat this record, but in all there were but eleven contests, and, except when A. Strath won in 1865, the "belt" went to a Morris or a Park. Both Tom Morris, Jr. and Willie Park have wins recorded for the present champion cup, while Willie Park, Jr., has twice led the field home. Mr. Hilton has also won twice. Hundreds of men who have made their livelihood at golf and amateurs who have made the game a passion ave tried to win only to fail, and since 1892 but one Scotch golfer has won, although to the éclat of winning was added the partisan feeling in the game of Scots against Southrons. Since 1892 the competition has been at seventy-two holes. When Vardon won last year he beat Taylor, who was fourth, by ten strokes. Both Taylor and Vardon beat the score Taylor made in 1895, when he last won at St. Andrews, and J. Braid tied it. The four leaders represented

METROPOLITAN GOLF.

Fine Play in the Baltusrol and Wee Burn

Two golfing lights were snuffed out vesterday t the annual open tournament of the Baltusrol his chances extinguished by young Watson, while Kennaday, the meteor of the Metropoli-Raismes, but only after a tie. In the semifinals this afternoon, when all the matches will De Raismes will play Tyng. The morning will be devoted to an eighteen hole interclub best Every condition again favored good golf yes terday. The weather was fine, links in splendid order, and there was a "gallery" about evenly made up of society folk and players, but en-thusiastic and quick to applaud the telling strokes in the matches they followed. The morning play produced low scoring, which whetted the interest for the feast to be served later, for Watson, Jr., made a 39, aided by a 2 on the ninth, and Kennaday had a 40 going out. Lockwood did the best work, for he scored 82, making his aggregate for three rounds over strange course only 249. His card was:

Extra holes—Graham, 6 5 4; Cory, 6 5 5.

The following is a summary of the Governor's cup first round:

A. G. Lockwood, Allyton, beat C. F. Watson, Essex County, by 6 up and 4 to play; R. C. Watson, Jr., Westbrook, beat F. H. Conklin, Essex County, by 7 up and 5 to play; J. R. Chadwiek, Richmond County, beat C. M. Hamilton, by default; A. Graham, North Jersey, beat C. B. Cory, Oskiey, by 1 up (2) holes; A. Kennaday, Montclair, beat J. A. Janin, Jr., Harbor Hill, by 7 up and 5 to play; F. J. J. de Raismers, Baltusrol, beat F. H. Bohlen, Philadelphia, by 4 up and 2 to play; James A. Tyng, Baltusrol, beat Grier Campbell, Baltusrol, by 2 up and 1 to play; L. P. Bayard, Jr., Baltusrol, beat H. G. Leavitt, Baltusrol, by 2 up and 1 to play.

Neither Watson, Jr., nor Lockwood greatly.

Watson was quite on his best game and seemingly too much class for Lockwood. The latter did not play up to his previous work. It was another instance of the pitcher that is sent Extra hole-De Raismes, 7; Kennaday, 8.

Bayard got the better of Tyng at the outset but the latter struck a great streak and won The cards:

The record up to date:

All Arrangements Made for the Tigers' Trip to Paris. PRINCETON, June 7.—The final arrangements for the trip of the Princeton track team abroad for the trip of the Princeton track team abroad this summer were made to-day when Bob Garrett, captain of the '97 team, which won the laurels in the Olympian games in Greece, arrived here from Europe. Well informed men say that Garrett had promised to give considerable financial aid to the undertaking and nothing definite could be decided until he got here. As previously announced, Princeton's seven point winners in the recent intercollegiate meet will compose the team. Instead of taking up training quarters in France, after the big English games on July 7, as was contemplated at first, it has been decided to continue training in a suburb of London until a few days before the Paris games.
